TRAINING POLICY REGARDING ALCOHOL POLICY

ALCOHOL SERVICE

When a guest leaves our restaurant intoxicated, the restaurant and the Manager who served the guest are both held liable for any harm or damage that ensues.

No fines or arrests are worth the hurt, harm or damage caused by irresponsible alcohol service. This information needs to be taken seriously.

Alcohol and the Human Body

Two 10 oz. mugs of beer, 2 % oz. of 80 proof liquor, and one 8 oz. glass of wine are equal in alcohol content.

As alcohol enters the body, 20% is absorbed into the bloodstream through stomach walls and 70 — 80% is absorbed through the small intestine. Once in the bloodstream, alcohol permeates through all body tissue. The more water that is in the body, the more diluted the alcohol becomes.

A small amount of alcohol in the blood (the result of consuming one drink per hour) will have a slight tranquilizing effect on most people. Even though alcohol may seem to stimulate the drinker, it is really a central nervous system depressant. After one or two drinks, the drinker's inhibitions may be lost and he/she may begin expressing him/herself more candidly, feeling like "the life of the party." Higher blood alcohol content levels depress brain activity, possibly impairing balance, memory, and muscular coordination. A greater alcohol intake within a relatively short time span depresses the brain further, causing severely affected judgment, dulled sensory perceptions and loss of control.

The rate at which alcohol enters the bloodstream (absorption rate) depends on several factors:

1. How quickly it is consumed.
2. Whether the stomach is full or empty
3. The kind of alcohol
4. How much the drinker weighs.

Wine and beer are absorbed more slowly than hard liquors because they contain small amounts of nonalcoholic substances. Diluting an alcoholic beverage with another liquid, such as water, also helps decrease the absorption rate. However, mixing alcohol with carbonated beverages increases the rate of absorption; the only difference between a mixed drink with water and a straight shot of liquor is that the absorption rate for the mixed drink is somewhat slower.

The same amount of alcohol can, and usually does, have more intense effects on a 120 lb. person than a 180 lb. person. Because alcohol is quickly distributed through the circulatory system, the heavier person will have a smaller concentration in his bloodstream.

We Ask for ID

Serving an underage guest alcohol may lead to your arrest. An employee serving alcohol to an underage guest may leave work in handcuffs — literally. The company will not provide defense for a manager who serves an underage guest. If you suspect your identification is false, excuse yourself from the table and show the ID to a Coach.

Signs of Intoxication

Anyone who has consumed an excessive amount of alcohol at one sitting will exhibit certain telltale signs of intoxication. There is usually a loss of inhibition. There is usually an impairment of judgment and reaction. There is also a loss of coordination.

Becoming drowsy (heavy eyelids) and glassy-eyed.
Drinking too fast.

Dealing with an Intoxicated Guest

- First and foremost— notify the coach.

- Do not serve any more alcohol to the table with the intoxicated guest
 - Remain in control of yourself. Do not argue. Do not overreact. Remember that alcohol can cause people to become irrational.
